

A furnace for the deposition and collection of molten silica particles to form a solid body, the furnace comprising a collection vessel, the base of which is lined with a purified refractory material, and a method of forming the solid body which comprises lining the base of the collection cup with crushed particles of purified refractory material.

[illegible]